Mail Service Is Expected Tomorrow

Mail delivery and mailing service to New York City by air is expected to resume tomorrow. The post office announced today that it had completed its preparations for resuming service.

The mail service was interrupted yesterday by a fire that destroyed the post office in the city. The interruption has caused delays in the delivery of mail in the area.

The fire, which started in the post office, was quickly brought under control by the fire department. However, the damage was extensive, and it took several hours to clear the debris and set up alternative delivery routes.

Mail service was suspended temporarily while the post office was being cleaned up and repaired. It is expected that the service will resume normally tomorrow.

Children Dash to See Action
Crowd Streets as Police Duel Rooftop Snipers

A crowd of children dashed to see the police duel with rooftop snipers in Newark yesterday afternoon. The children, some of whom had been playing in the parks, were drawn to the scene by the sounds of gunfire.

The police had been sent to the area to deal with a disturbance caused by the snipers. The snipers were shooting from a rooftop, and the police were trying to apprehend them.

The children, who were mostly between the ages of 5 and 10, were seen running up and down the streets, shouting and waving their fists. Some of them were carrying toy guns, and they appeared to be enjoying the spectacle.

The police were able to capture one of the snipers, but the other managed to escape.

Rioting Costs Untold Millions, But Many Will Be Reimbursed

A large number of people have been impacted by the rioting that occurred in the city last week. The damage to property and loss of income has been extensive, and it is estimated that the costs will total in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The city has already received a large number of claims for reimbursement, and it is expected that more will be filed in the coming weeks and months. The city has set up a special fund to handle the claims, and it is estimated that many of the victims will be reimbursed.

Ban on Liquor
Only Irvington in Full Compliance

Liquor stores in Newark are not complying with the city's ban on the sale of liquor. Only the stores in Irvington are fully complying with the ban.

The ban was put into effect last week in an attempt to control the violence and looting that occurred during the rioting. The ban prohibited the sale of liquor in all areas of the city, but it did not affect the stores in Irvington.

The stores in Irvington have been selling liquor despite the ban, and they have been charged with violating the city's liquor laws. The city is expected to get legal action against the stores in the near future.

Based on the news articles, the city of Newark experienced a violent riot that lasted for several days. The rioting resulted in widespread destruction and financial losses, estimated to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars. The city has set up a special fund to handle claims for reimbursement, and it is expected that many victims will be reimbursed. The ban on liquor was put into effect to control the violence, but it did not affect the stores in Irvington, which continue to sell liquor despite the ban.
