Tamil Robinson, born and raised in Newark, was educated at the prestigious Arts High School where he forged his expertise in freehand sketching and painting. After high school, a master pattern maker afforded Tamil a tutelage in the discipline, with an understanding of aesthetics, in fashion and textiles. Tamil then launched a street-art airbrush studio, where he would airbrush his extraordinary creative designs on clothing. He subsequently ascended to designing his own line of fashions, and garnered a sports licensing in apparel for companies such as Puma, NFL, Reebok, and the Allen Iverson I-3 NBA Collection. Tamil has consulted with other companies in celebrity licensing and has traveled abroad to various fabric mills to develop his own line of textile patterns.

Mr. Robinson creates both fashion and his own textile art through his company, the AMIAT (All Moods in All Textiles) Group which focuses on the design, sourcing, production and exporting of fabrics for a range of apparel from head-wear to footwear and accessories as well as home furnishings and textiles.

Tamil has evolved the TAMIL ROBINSON GROUP, a division of A&T Global, LLC, into a full service fashion design studio specializing in design, sourcing, production, and exporting. His broad range of apparel and accessories sell to worldwide markets who cultivate and perfect his business for major apparel companies in the industry.

In addition to designing for private and public licensing companies, Tamil has partnered with some of fashions top executives, and has launched a marketing and merchandising relationship with major national department stores and specialty chains.
